The advertiser respectfully informs the Gentry of Hongkong that in one half hour he can tame the most viscious animal that can be produced, so that he will allow a wheel-barrow to be run over him, a gun fired off his back, and will allow a child to ride him without saddle or bridle; the animal shall allow the advertiser to leap upon his back, over his hind quarters, or over his head. The horse shall playfully canter after him and from him and return again at his whistle. Gentlemen wishing to learn will not be charged until they can perform the above.

THE papers which are received by the present mail do not in any way foreshadow the fall of the ministry, which was destined apparently to be brought about very shortly after their latest dates. On the contrary in two decisions, the government had obtained the victory and their supporters were making much of these occurrences. Trained upon majorities expressed by single figures, they had learned to be truly and warmly grateful for triumphant victories of 14 and 28. The effect of the defeat they sustained on the bribery question, when they vainly opposed an instruction to the committee, to consider this matter of bribery and corruption while deliberating on the details of the reform bill, was wiped out by the defeat of Lord STANLEY in committee by a much larger majority than that which pronounced against his celebrated amendment on the second reading. The motion which he brought forward was identical in principle with the former amendment and the asperity with which Mr. GLADSTONE opposed it showed that although Lord STANLEY is accused of trickery, it was the government in this case which meditated a trick. By bringing the Franchise bill and Redistribution bill into committee simultaneously in deference to the general wish of the House, Mr. GLADSTONE did in effect concede the principle of Lord STANLEY's original amendment which was simply directed to preventing the passage of a measure for the reduction of the suffrage, unless it formed part of an intelligible scheme of parliamentary reform. When the government promised to commit the two bills together they did in effect, promise that the one should not be passed without the other, and the motion brought forward by Lord STANLEY to consider the Redistribution clauses before finishing with the Franchise clauses would merely have made it impossible for the government to avoid doing that, which they had undertaken to do. The proposal, however, seems to have excited more passionate anger than was brought about in the first instance by the attempt to defeat them altogether, and freely as Lord STANLEY had been abused in the liberal press before, he seems to have been vituperated more bitterly on this occasion than ever. He is specially accused of trickery and manœuvring on account of this straightforward attempt to bind the government down to its word, when of all men connected with politics in the present day he has been conspicuously held forward for years in the liberal press as a man of painfully earnest and conscientious temperament. Such is the worth of human praise. Events however, seem to have been reserving LORD STANLEY's justification and reward. A little more triumph for the RUSSELL—GLADSTONE faction and then a terrible fall was appointed. In the interval Mr. WALPOLE was doomed to be overthrown in an attempt to save the county franchise from degradation, and our present papers are left rejoicing over the majestic march of the government towards the realisation of all its ideas, the discomfiture of the Tories and the permanent establishment of democratic principles in the ascendant.

On the 18th of June, the anniversary of the day on which another important victory was once obtained, the impending catastrophe was announced as it were by a defeat of the government on a motion by Lord DUNKELLIN,—eldest son of Lord CLANRICARDE, and liberal member for County Galway,—for a rating, in preference to a rental franchise. There must have been a sound of revelry by night, in the Palace of Westminster when that vote was taken, and the desperate champions of Bedford's fated Chieftain were left in the lurch, sinking under an adverse majority of eleven. The telegraph does not inform us as to the numbers present in the house, but it must have been a great division, for the motion of course went to the root of the reform question, and the government must have whipped their jaded pack for dear life before the division bell can have been allowed to ring. Well, might there be uneasiness in the city when a government, after clinging to office by the help of a majority of five in a house of more than six hundred members, was left on a vital question in a minority of eleven. Then, indeed, the Cabinet must have known that it was time to clear out the private drawers in Downing Street, and make way for new tenants. As the wistful, wearied Chancellor of the Exchequer lay back on the sacred green cushions of the Treasury Bench, and saw the tellers coming up the floor with the wrong pair on the right flank of that momentous little line, he must have seen with a single glance that Her Majesty's Government merely held office until the appointment of their successors. All his struggles were useless, all his sacrifices to dignity, and political principle, all his turns and windings were of no avail, he might as well have had his hands in his pockets the whole time, or have stayed at home writing, like poor Sir G. C. LEWIS on the Astronomy of the Ancients, or translating Homer into English verse like the brilliant Earl, the leader of the opposition, who at that moment was probably looking on from the peers' seats under the gallery, calmly through his spectacles, at the triumph of his party. There must have been DISRAELI just opposite with folded arms and head a little thrown back and features expressing no emotions of any kind while the sloping crowd of excited supporters behind reaching in dense masses from the floor to the wall high up under the gallery, was making the glass ceiling ring again with perfect shrieks of delight as their long exile from power and influence and the manifold pleasures of being in office, were seen to be at an end. These are the great scenes of the house vivid in the recollection of those who have seen them years ago, bringing tears of wild excitement to the eyes of elderly men who take part in them, and putting for the moment all idea of doing anything but shout, ridiculously out of the question.

The members of the Government seem to have taken a day to recover their self possession, and then on the 20th, a Wednesday, when the house met early, Mr. GLADSTONE must have come forward saying, that after the adverse decision of the House the night before last, his colleagues and himself had come to the conclusion that they could not consistently with a due regard to the interests of Her Majesty's government continue to hold office, that they had consequently requested Her Majesty's permission to place their resignations in her hands, that they had now to inform the House that they merely held office until their successors were appointed. He will most likely have added that under existing circumstances the House would probably agree with him in thinking that the course of public business could scarcely go on in Parliament until the reconstitution of Her Majesty's government and that he would therefore move that at its rising the House should stand adjourned until,—some date about a week in advance of the day on which he was speaking. Whereupon DISRAELI will have risen, and have seconded the motion just made, in a voice of gentle melancholy as if he were praising the virtues of a deceased friend at a funeral luncheon, hinting that the party he had the honour of representing on that occasion,—and in spite of the melancholy tinge in his voice, there would be a new resonance in it, not altogether repressible,—was moved with a feeling of profound admiration for the members of Her Majesty's government, and of respect for the upright, and able policy they had pursued, in spite of the little misfortune which had occurred, and there would be again hearty cheering from behind, as if the Conservative party had been consistent admirers of Lord RUSSELL and Mr. GLADSTONE through life, and particularly in connexion with the question of Reform. The telegraph is dumb with reference to the ministerial crisis from the 20th to the 27th when it says that Lord DERBY had been sent for, and immediately afterwards that Lord STANLEY is Secretary for Foreign Affairs. As to the events of the intervening period, speculation is at fault. Whether the new ministry is to be a coalition or a purely conservative administration is altogether uncertain. It is most likely at any rate that some ministry with Lord DERBY at its head had been formed from the fact that the Foreign secretaryship is spoken of. That this will be a matter for satisfaction with all, but the most violent partisans of the Whigs or those who, caring for nothing, but the introduction of the democratic changes in the constitution, hoped on this occasion to carry out their policy through the Whigs, we should think tolerably certain. The Whigs have been too long in power altogether. That was felt even during Lord PALMERSTON's life time, and at his death the honorable course for the remains of his cabinet would have been immediate resignation. Had they resigned at that period they would have been in a far better position than they are now, and would have been saved the disgrace of their shuffling and ignominious conduct with regard to the Reform bill. Now they have resisted so long that they are thrown down with violence and will suffer severely from the fall. By so much, will the Conservatives gain, and coming into office at the outbreak of the war on the continent they will be looked upon all over Europe as the real holders of public confidence.

A HOAX.

We are surprised that our contemporary the Evening Mail should have been hoaxed by a document of so absurd a nature as that which it published on Saturday evening in reference to the Court Martial on Dr. Woodward. The hoax took the form of a document which was given to the reporter of the Evening Mail and purported to be signed by Col. Lovell of the Royal Engineers which said, "The court forbids the publication of the proceedings in this trial or any portion of the proceedings until the final conclusion of the case." The notion of supposing that an intelligent officer not unacquainted it is to be presumed, with the simple elements of English law, and necessarily knowing something at any rate about the limits of his authority as president of a court martial should have put his name to such a silly piece of impudent bombast as the document here published, shows a dulness in apprehending "chaff" which we should not have looked for in a newspaper office. Can the Evening Mail seriously suppose that Col. LOVELL is ignorant of the fact that he has no more right to dictate to the conductors of a public journal, than a street coolie, and knowing this is it to be supposed that he would make this feeble effort to bully an institution like the Press? Men of the world do not make themselves ridiculous in this manner by attempting to transgress the limits of their authority.

The Government Gazette of Saturday contains the formal announcement to that, the Hon. Julian, Pauncefote has been appointed Attorney General in this colony.

During the absence of C. C. Smith Esq. who has gone per Adventure, to Japan for the benefit of his health; F. W. Mitchell Esq. Postmaster General, will assist the Hon. J. C. Whyte in his magisterial duties.

In the Government Gazette of Saturday appears the announcement that the Home Government has confirmed ordinance No. 3 of 1866, entitled "An ordinance to enable companies, existing at the time of the commencement of, "The companies ordinance 1865" or thereafter formed under any other ordinance or letters patent, to register under the said ordinance.

The military and naval authorities, adhere to the traditions of by-gone ages, even in the matter of lamps; and a walk eastward along the Queen's road, will convince, the most careless observer, of the truth of the above statement. When the wayfarer arrives abreast of the main guard house, and the angle of the barrack railing, a vista of darkness, is before him, extending along the whole frontage of the buildings in military occupation. On emerging from this shade, and crossing the nullah, he is once more in the regions of light. Passing the dockyard as quickly as possible, so black is the prospect, through the gateway, and proceeding a short distance along the road, the military store is dimly visible, on his right. To the left, enveloped in gloom, is the military hospital, a dull and melancholy place, on the brightest day. Still hurrying on, a railing, enclosing military stores, of every description, is passed in total darkness; until reaching the limits of the ground occupied by the military authorities, the passenger once more emerges into the regions of gas and civilisation. The explanation is that gas is not as yet recognised in any of the departments, in his Colony, under the supervision, of the War office, or the Admiralty, and if any person is curious in the matter, it is probable, that, some oil lamps could be discovered, stuck about, on the various buildings, and gateways, along the route, already described. The daily trimming, cleaning, and waste of oil, which goes on for no earthly use, except the profit of three or four compradores is an illustration of the dull, unintelligent routine which prevails here with reference to the administration of military affairs.

BEFORE J. C. WHYTE, Esq.

STEALING A PASS.

Hee a hoy, house servant to T. Tiller Esq. Arbuth not Road, was charged with stealing a pass from the desk of his master, on the 21st inst.

Mr. Tiller said that on Saturday evening, prisoner left his house without permission, taking a pass from his desk. In the morning he returned, and when accused of taking the pass, he at first denied it, but subsequently produced it. Mr. Tiller did not wish to press the charge, as prisoner had been with him for some time, and generally his conduct had been satisfactory.

Fined $1.

A STOWAWAY.

John Fraser, fireman unemployed, was charged with being found on board the British ship Bosworth, under suspicious circumstances.

P. C. 44 John Archer, said, that yesterday morning under a search warrant, he went on board the ship Bosworth to search for some soldiers who had deserted. While conducting the search he found prisoner concealed. The Captain denied all knowledge of him and said he had no business there, consequently he was arrested, and brought ashore.

Prisoner said he could get no employment in Hongkong, and wanted to get away somewhere else, and as the Bosworth was going to San Francisco, in a few days, he stowed away in her.

He was sent to gaol for 14 days.

ASSAULT IN A BROTHEL.

Heinrich Hannemann, a seaman was charged with assaulting Lai yuet ho, in the brothel No. 160 Hollywood Road, and breaking property valued at $2.

Lai-yuet-ho, deposed, that about 5 p.m., yesterday, defendant came to her house, but on being asked for money he kicked her and threw a dressing case worth $2 at her, which fell down, and was broken.

Defendant said that he tendered an American gold $2.50 piece, and the people in the house would only give him $2 25 for it, so he smashed the box.

Complainant and another woman both denied any knowledge of the gold piece.

Defendant was sentenced to pay $2, for the damage he had done.

BREAKING A STREET LAMP.

Chun-a-pai was charged with the above offence.

Soolah Abdool White, private in the Ceylon Rifles deposed, that being on sentry duty yesterday afternoon, he saw prisoner deliberately take up a stone, and smash one of the gas lamps. He immediately arrested him. Prisoner who said he was a hawker, but had no license, was sent to gaol for one month with hard labour, as a rogue and vagabond.

ROBBERY FROM A SAIL LOFT

Hong-a-sew Cheong-lun-pong, and others not in custody, were charged with burglariously entering the sail loft of Mr. William Dolan, Duddell street, and stealing therefrom 10 bolts of canvass.

Mr. Dolan stated that the second prisoner was his watchman. Last night about ten o'clock he was informed that a robbery had been committed at his sail loft, and on examination he found that the loft had been entered from the roof, and ten bolts of canvas abstracted. Two bolts (produced) had been recovered by the police, and he identified them as his property.

Inspector Cronin stated that there were four men yet at large, who were connected with the robbery, and requested his worship to remand the case.

Remand granted to Saturday, 28th instant.

A SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER.

Pong-chun-toi, who described himself as a rice pounder, was charged with being found on the roof of a house in Station St. Ty-pin-shan under suspicious circumstances at a very early hour this morning.

Police Constable 151, stated that this morning about half past one, being on duty outside No. 8 Station, he heard the cry of "Thief." He immediately ran in the direction of the alarm, and saw two men jump from the roof of a house. He succeeded in capturing the prisoner, but the other man escaped.

Inspector Cronin, stated, that the house had been examined this morning, and some tiles found to have been taken off.

The case was remanded to the 25th inst.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Under this head there were (as usual on Monday morning) quite a number of cases, chiefly of seamen who had come on shore on liberty. In most instances the offenders were sent on board their ships, with a caution not to show themselves in court again. The magistrate remarked that it appeared to him as if sailors considered it their bounden duty to get drunk as soon as they came on shore.

AN UNLICENSED BROTHEL.

On the information of Inspector Jones, a woman, (who said her name was Chung a yee, but who had been previously summoned under the title of Wong a choy) was to day fined the sum of $100, for keeping an unlicensed brothel.

STEALING IRON PIPING.

Kong a kew, marine hawker, was charged with stealing a piece of cast iron, apparently part of a water pipe.

Police Constable 289, said, that yesterday afternoon he saw prisoner carrying two baskets slung on a bamboo, in one of which was the piece of iron. As he could give no reasonable account of how it came into his possession, he was taken into custody. Prisoner said he bought the iron from a woman for twenty cash.

He was committed for one months' hard labour as a vagabond.

P. C. 382, who on Saturday last was charged with appropriating to himself the sum of $112, which had been given him to return to some prisoners in his charge, was again brought up to-day. Prisoner neglected the opportunity given him of paying the money into court, and still persisted in asserting his innocence, the evidence however was completely conclusive, and the case was fully proved against him. P. C. William Davies, and P.C. 250, saw the American notes in his possession and described them.

Prisoner was sentenced to pay the sum of $10, to the first complainant, and $5, to the second, or in default undergo one month's imprisonment, in addition to a fine of $25, or two month's imprisonment.

Mutual Recrimination.

Mr. E. Rosenthal, of the firm of Blum Bros. and Co. was summoned yesterday at the Police court before Mr. Whyte for an assault upon the person of a Mr. Ellis Lee, late of Shanghai.

Mr. Lee, said, I am a store-keeper, carrying on business on my own account. On Saturday last, I went to defendant's store and selected some goods for which I gave a cheque. I said I would take delivery of the goods on Monday, and defendant said I could have them any time on that day. This morning I sent for my goods, and the delivery was refused. I then called on defendant to know the reason of this. He stated that I had previously acted in a dishonourable manner, and that he would not deliver the goods until he ascertained whether my cheque would be cashed or not. I said that was an extraordinary manner of conducting business, and that I had never acted half so dishonourably as his house was known to have done, both here, and in Shanghai. Defendant immediately knocked me down, and struck me several times while I was on the ground. I called out "Police" and my boy who was with me fetched a constable. Another gentleman belonging to defendants' firm also assisted him in attempting to drag me from the road into their house. When the constable arrived, they were both standing under the porch, and defied the constable to take them without a warrant, as they were on their own premises.

Mr. Rosenthal stated: On Saturday last complainant came to my office to purchase some goods. His antecedents are so bad that I did not care about having anything to do with him, but handed him over to my Portuguese clerk. Complainant selected some goods for which he wrote a cheque. On examining the cheque afterwards, I found that he had post-dated it for Sunday 22nd. Upon this, and knowing the character of complainant, I refused to deliver the goods this morning to his order, until I ascertained whether the cheque would be honoured or not. Complainant came to me before ten o'clock this morning, and in a blustering manner demanded why his goods were not delivered. I said that in consequence of his former dishonourable conduct, and the numerous dirty tricks he had played in Shanghai, I should not deliver the goods until I ascertained whether or not the cheque would be cashed. He said "I never acted half so dishonourably as your house has been known to do in Shanghai." We were standing in the porch of the door at the time and I struck him, and knocked him into the middle of the road. When I mentioned his dishonourable conduct he raised his umbrella in a threatening manner, I do not know whether he intended to poke strike me, but if not, he certainly meant to poke my eyes out. I only struck him in self-defence.

The Magistrate remarked that it was a disgraceful business on both sides.

Mr. Rosenthal said it certainly was disgraceful for him to be mixed up in any way with such a character as complainant. A great many more hard things were said on both sides, and only the respect due to the court prevented a regular exchange of "Billingsgate." Mr. Rosenthal said that he did not think any assault had been proved, he struck complainant only in self-defence, and the statement that any one else interfered in the matter, was perfectly false.

The Magistrate said that there was no evidence to show that complainant attempted to strike defendant first.

Mr. Rosenthal said it was hard if one had to wait and have his eyes poked out before he acted in his own defence.

The Magistrate remarked that in his opinion an assault had been committed by Mr. Rosenthal, he had nothing to do with complainant's previous character or anything that might previously have transpired between either of them. At the same time, he should make due allowance for Mr. Rosenthal's feelings at the language used by complainant towards him, which was quitely unjustifiable although it was not sufficient reason for knocking a man from the porch of the door into the middle of the road.

He should fine defendant $5 for the assault.

General Court Martial Yesterday.

DR. WOODWARD'S CASE.

This case has at last spun itself out: The two remaining charges which we were unable to obtain on the occasion of our last notice on the proceedings in this case, are of the same uninteresting if not slight nature as that already published, and one is suprised on perusing them that such squabbles as they represent, can be brought to a Court Martial. On the present occasion, the charges against the prisoner are as follows:—

For having in a letter dated Hongkong 4th July 1866 addressed to the Principal Medical officer, Hongkong, reflected injuriously on the professional conduct of his Senior Medical officer, Staff Surgeon Woolfreys M. D. by imputing to him a great want of judgment, and the adoption of a course not in accordance "with the usages of the Service" with reference to his professional treatment of Assistant Surgeon Hyde, 2nd Battalion 20th Regt. during the time that he Staff Surgeon Woolfreys had medical charge of the said Assistant Surgeon Hyde, such imputations on the part of Surgeon Woodward 2nd Battn. 20th Regiment against his Senior officer being unfounded and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline

For having in a letter dated Hongkong 4th July 1866, addressed to his Commanding Officer, accused him, the said Commanding Officer, of having occasioned "delay and suspense," by not complying with his, Surgeon Woodward's recommendation, in respect to Assistant Surgeon Hyde 2nd Battalion 20th Regiment whereas such delay and suspense were occasioned by Surgeon Woodward's own neglect of duty, and disobedience of the standing orders of the Battalion, such conduct on the part of Surgeon Woodward 2nd Battalion 20th Regiment being to the prejudice of good order and Military Discipline

For highly improper conduct in having at Hongkong on or about the 10th July 1866, as reported in a letter of the above date addressed by Surgeon Woodward to the Acting Adjutant 2nd Battalion 20th Regiment discharged from the Sick List Assistant Surgeon Hyde 2nd Battalion 20th Regiment although the Surgeon Woodward well knew that the mental condition of Assistant Surgeon Hyde was then under inquiry by a Medical Board assembled by order of His Excellency the Major General Commanding, and that the said Board had not completed its proceedings.

Dr. Woodward the prisoner read his defence at the sitting of the court yesterday. He said in reference to the first charge that his reasons for stating that Surgeon Woolfreys showed "a great want of judgment," were that after the lapse of only ten days he returned Mr. Hyde insane, though on his arrival in Hongkong he Surgeon Woolfreys reported to Dr. Dick that Mr. Hyde was quite composed and that all his faculties were clear. Dr. Woodward also stated that Mr. Hyde, was of a most excitable, nervous temperament, and that a decision, on the question of insanity, where there is the slightest doubt, requires months of observation, and that during his professional experience, extending over fifteen years service, he had never seen that usage departed from, and though it would have been better had he not made a remark reflecting on his senior officer, still his statement could not be considered unfounded. Dr. Woodward concluded his defence on the 1st charge by quoting a passage from a book on insanity. In reference to the second charge several letters were read by the prisoner all referring to Mr. Hyde's treatment. The defence however being of a very lengthy character it is of course impossible to notice it in detail on the third charge Dr. Woodward puts forth a denial, as to his being guilty of any improper conduct in discharging Dr. Hyde from the sick list &c., whilst a medical board was sitting on him, and submitted, that as surgeon of the Regiment, he had an undoubted right, to discharge any officer or man, from the sick list, without reference to any one, and that it was with Dr. Dick's knowledge and concurrence, that he discharged Mr. Hyde which he would not have done under the peculiar circumstances of the case, on his own responsibility and, that it was reasonable to suppose that, if the principal medical officer, objected to the course he adopted, he would have told him so. After detailing a large portion of the cross examination of Dr. Dick, Dr. Woodward in reference to his capabilities of judging mental diseases, stated that he had made that complaint a study for several months at an eminent public institution. Dr. Woodward in conclusion drew attention to the great want of cordiality, and good feeling existing between Colonel Browne and himself, more especially for the last ten months, during which latter period no conversation had passed between them, except on duty, and suggested that his arrest was due in a great measure to the ill feeling entertained towards him by Colonel Browne, and it was his, Dr. Woodward's, firm opinion, that many of his acts, and motives had been misconstrued, and the carrying out of his professional duties rendered unpleasant by the same influence. And in conclusion he trusted that the court would give the whole matter their mature consideration and proposed the following questions:—In the first place, as to whether the statement, I unfortunately made, concerning Surgeon Woolfreys, is unfounded or not. Secondly am I to blame, in any way for my urgently reiterated recommendations, not having been carried out. And lastly am I not justified in adopting any course of treatment, I conscientiously considered necessary for the reestablishment of my patient's health.

European Politics.

The following passages conclude the resumé of Continental politics in the China Express, part of which, we published yesterday.

AUSTRIA.

The Austrian journals, which seem never to have had faith in the idea of a Congress, have continued full of preparations and defiance. The formation of four fortified camps, for containing depôts, magazines, and ambulances, has been definitively declared upon. The first, already commenced on the left bank of the Danube, will defend Vienna; the second will be established at Teschen, in Austrian Silesia; the third on the frontiers of Saxony—three general officers are on the spot for the purpose of choosing the exact situation; the fourth at Kremsier, in Moravia, where several brigades of the Austrian army have already arrived. The Austrian army in Venetia, now numbering 128,000 men, will shortly be increased to 200,000. General Allemany, the military commander of Venice, has notified to the municipality to always keep provisions for three months' supply. An enormous quantity of cables and anchors has been stored, in order to bar the port, which is already closed during the night. Two old frigates have been anchored off the port, ready to be sunk for the purpose of obstructing the entry. The movement for the formation of Volunteer corps continued actively, both in Vienna and in the provinces. The Tyroleans residing in Vienna have formed a company of their own. In Galicia Count Staronski has undertaken to form a regiment of Lancers, and enlistments in it have already been very numerous. At Prague the nobility have decided to form, at their own expense, a battalion of Chasseurs. In Carinthia a committee has been formed to act in concert with Styria in the formation of a corps of Chasseurs of the Alps. At Troppau, at Lintz, and in fact, everywhere, committees have been established to receive voluntary subscriptions and enlistments. The Gazette of Venice publishes an official notification ordering a second conscription for 1866. The Venetian provinces are to furnish a contingent of 8,117 men.

An Imperial decree has been published, ordering a forced loan of 12 millions of florins in the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom. The proclamation accompanying this decree states this measure to have been adopted in consequence of the law of the 5th inst. in reference to the Government currency being imperative for Lombardo-Venetia which, must, nevertheless, contribute towards the extraordinary necessities of the country. The payments of the loan are to be made in silver or gold, in return for which the Government will issue at par, bonds of 100, 10, and 1 florins, bearing interest at 6 per cent. The committee for the control of the Public Debt will control the issue of the bonds, which is not to exceed the amount of 12 million florins.

Prince Czartoryski has addressed a letter to the Czastets of Cracow, declaring that it would be treason for his countrymen to join the Italians, and urges the establishment of a Polish Volunteer corps in Gallicia, expresses himself well satisfied with the system established in Austria as regards the Polish provinces, and contrasts it favourably with the Russian and Prussian systems, which tend to denationalise the population. By establishing this Volunteer corps, the Gallicians would strengthen a Polish centre of 5,000,000 souls, which would be an important aid in the realisation of the aspirations of the Polish nationality.

RUSSIA.

A strong Russian corps of observation is being concentrated on the frontiers of Prussian Silesia and Galicia; and the forces in the Caucasus, on the Turkish frontier, are being strengthened. On the west of the Euxine Russia has also formed a camp in Bessarabia.

A report of the engagement which took place on the Syr-Daria on the 17th April has appeared in the official military journal. Towards the end of March the Russians were kept on the alert by rumours of the preparations which the Emir of Bokhara was making for an attack, but these reports appeared to be highly exaggerated, and no indications of the real intentions of the Emir were observed till the 16th, when it was known that a considerable force of the enemy was within twenty versts of the Russian camp. A small body sent forward to reconnoitre was immediately attacked, but the Russians not only stood their ground but forced the enemy to retire, and pursued them for a considerable distance, when on reaching the top of a hill they saw a large body of cavalry belonging to the Beys of Djuzik, Samarcand and Gurd Touba. General Romanoffsky sent Count Vorontsoff-Dashkoff to attack the Bokharians, who, being ten times more numerous than the Russians, were able to stand their ground for some time, but they were eventually routed by the Cossacks, who pursued them to a distance of more than twenty versts. Without losing a single man the Russians made fifteen prisoners, and took about 14,000 sheep, which the Bokharians had brought with them. General Tchernaiff reached St. Petersburg on the 18th. It is said that he has come to give an account of the state of the country; but he is not the right man to be entrusted with such an important post, and he will consequently not resume the command. As a general his talents are highly appreciated; but he has no political capacity, and he committed the error of being too zealous. The Russians have no wish, at present at least, to extend the limits of their frontier in Central Asia.

The presence among us of the Bishop of Moray and Ross (writes a correspondent from St. Petersburg on the 30th of May), is an event of no small importance in the eyes of the members of the English Church. Episcopal visits have hitherto been very rare; in fact, once only within the memory of the oldest inhabitant has a confirmation been held in the chapel of the British factory. The right reverend prelate arrived on Wednesday last, and on Sunday, the 27th (Whit Sunday by the Russian calendar), he confirmed upwards of fifty candidates in presence of a crowded congregation. The earnest and heart-stirring address which preceded the solemn rite made a deep impression on all his hearers. After the service the Holy Communion was administered, the attendance being, if anything, larger than at Easter. The bishop visits Cronstadt and Moscow, and it is hoped that his presence in the latter city may tend to heal the unfortunate differences that have arisen between the chaplain and his flock as to the proper mode of celebrating Divine worship. On his way home his lordship will again stay among us for a few days and preach a sermon in aid of the funds of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. On Tuesday he was entertained by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg. By coming here he has still further strengthened what had long been a growing feeling among us, namely, that in these days of rapid travelling, we ought to enjoy the privilege of episcopal visitation regularly every three or four years, and not, as heretofore, have to be satisfied with seeing a bishop perhaps twice in a century.

THE KINGDOM OF ITALY.

From this quarter also we hear of nothing, but preparation for war. The Royal decree for the formation of 20 more battalions of volunteers and two battalions of bersaglieri, orders also the formation of two regiments of cavalry. The Minister of War has ordered the formation of a camp near Capua. A circular of the Minister of War prohibits the admission into the volunteer battalions of officers who have resigned their commissions in the regular army. This measure is intended to prevent the disorganisation of the cadres in the army. A number of officers who had served under Garibaldi and others were retiring from the regular army for the purpose of entering the volunteer corps. The formation of a fifth corps d'armée has been decided upon. Troops are to be sent to the meridional provinces, where reactionary movements are feared. There will be no Polish legion, so as not to wound the susceptibility of Russia.

An iron-clad division of the Prussian fleet is expected in the Adriatic, to join its forces to those of Admiral Persano.

THE DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES.

Prince Charles of Hohenzollern has officially notified the foreign Powers of his having ascended the throne of the Principalities, but to the present time he has not received recognition from any foreign Government. The Chamber of Deputies has voted the Prince a civil list of 100,000 ducats, but he only consented to accept the sum necessary for the maintenance of his house-hold. The Prince has addressed a second letter to the Sultan, stating that present circumstances do not admit of his proceeding to Constantinople immediately, but he will do so shortly. Turkey decided to forego her proposed intervention in the principalities in the belief that the Conference on the Danubian question would discover a means of fully vindicating the dignity of the Turkish Government.

M. Jean Ghika has been named Minister of Public Works, and M. Stourdza Secretary to the Prince.

Matrimonial Felicity.

(From the Daily Telegraph.)

"Property has its duties as well as its rights," said Mr. Drummond; and the assertion was considered rather a startling until, long years afterwards, it was capped by the astounding proclamation of M. Proudhon that "property is theft." We should be content to aver that matrimony has its troubles as well as its delights, were we not compelled to go a little further and declare that matrimony does not necessarily mean murder. Accidents, we are told, will happen in even the best-regulated families. Papa may be a pattern exemplar of British virtue, going to bed at ten, and rising at nine; mamma may be the very highest type of the English matron; and, yet, despite parental and maternal care, Georgiana may elope with the footman and Reginald, after a disastrous "book" upon the Derby, may seek "fresh fields and pastures new" in the Australian colonies. Few households are so happy as to be without their scapegrace, male or female. Suppose, however, that the family is not well-regulated, and much more serious casualties become possible. We have, to-day, to invoke the sympathy of the public for Mr. and Mrs. Henry Keeble, of Highgate. Husband and wife are both more than sixty years of age. Early in 1860, Mr. Keeble had a peculiar delusion. He had been a respectable greengrocer in his day, and he had retired from business with independent means; but he seems to have found retirement rather monotonous, and he sought a melancholy consolation from ardent liquors. These, like fire, may be good servants but are always extremely bad masters; and the next result of Mr. Keeble's pursuit of happiness under difficulties was a decidedly bad attack of delirium tremens. One night, he took it into his head that there were thieves in the house. According to his own statement, he suddenly became impressed with a conviction that a couple of men had rushed into the room where he and his wife were sitting, and that these men meant to commit murder. Thereupon he drew out his small pocket-knife and, "knowing that if he cut their sinews they could not go far," he proceeded to carry his idea into execution. Result: Mrs. Keeble, after several screams of "Murder," was found "lying on the ground, fully dressed, but covered with blood from head to foot." The police satisfied themselves, by careful examination, that there had been neither forcible entrance nor forcible exit of thieves, and Mr. Henry Keeble was taken into custody. He stood his trial in due time, and the jury found that he was "not guilty." We have no desire to quarrel with the verdict of the jury.

A few days ago Mr. Keeble made his appearance at Highgate Petty Sessions, and the second chapter of the story—we will not say the second act of the tragedy—was recited. Even since the husband "cut the sinews," so that his wife "could not go far"—ever since that unfortunate mistake, in fact, which led him to punish her as a burglar—the poor woman has been under medical treatment. One day she became exceptionally ill, and a doctor was hurriedly sent for. "Some wrong medicine had been given her," and it was found, upon inquiry, that she had taken a considerable quantity of iodine. There had been no idea of thieves in the house this time, and it is not alleged, on behalf of Mr. Keeble, that the delirium tremens from which he was suffering in December was still inflicting him in May. The probabilities, indeed, are very much against such a supposition. Five or six months of that malady would prove fatal to the stoutest "engrosser" that ever drank "not wisely, but too well." Under these circumstances it became somewhat interesting to know how the iodine was administered. The bottle that had contained it was produced; on one side of it there was a label "Not to be taken," on the other a label with the one word, "Poison." Further inquiry elicited the fact that the iodine had been administered by Mr. Keeble, who stated, when officially questioned, that his wife had asked him for her medicine, and he had taken a bottle to her which she said was the right one; he did not think of reading the label, nor did she. Considering all that had previously occurred it is perhaps a little surprising that Mr. Keeble should not have been somewhat more careful. As a rule, people ought to look at labels, especially when they have been warned that some of the medicine bottles contain poison. The constitution of Mrs. Keeble was, however, in all probability a good one. She survived the gashes inflicted with the pocket knife, and she has apparently survived her draught from the little phial. It has been stated in evidence that her husband cannot read without his spectacles—that he had not put them on when she asked for medicine, and that this was the cause of the unfortunate mistake. But it is not stated in evidence that he took the trouble to search for his spectacles—a course of action which would probably have suggested itself to nine hundred and ninety-nine people out of every thousand. The case, however, having been fully heard, the Highgate magistrates expressed their opinion that although great want of caution had been shown, and although the circumstances were very suspicious, there was not sufficient evidence to carry the matter further, and the charge must therefore be dismissed.

We have already declared that we do not wish to quarrel with the decision of the jury, and we have even less inclination to dispute the judgment of the magistrates; but we are anxious to direct the attention of the public at large, and of her private friends in particular, to the excessively uncomfortable position of Mrs. Henry Keeble. That lady's husband may be particularly fond of her, but the unfortunate style in which he has twice contrived to manifest his conjugal affection can hardly be considered as agreeable or safe. We are simply stating a case which every married lady can perfectly comprehend when we say that it is unpleasant to have a husband who, himself raising a false alarm of thieves, falls upon his bosom's idol with a pocket knife and cuts her sinews; or who, when he is asked for the medicine bottle, pours out a dose of poison. Mr. Keeble may be all that Mrs. Keeble's fancy painted him; but, under the circumstances, would it not be as well if they ceased to live together? It is certainly not the business of journalism to engage in what is called "violating the sanctity of private life;" but as the unfortunate husband has already been twice tried, we venture to ask what precautions have been taken to enforce the sanctity of life itself? Nor is it merely in the interest of the persons immediately concerned that we urge their friends to interfere. An elderly man who sees thieves where none exist, and forthwith proceeds to cut the sinews of the nearest person, may be a fine old fellow in his way, but he is hardly to be accounted a perfectly safe member of society. Fond hallucinations of that sort are extremely apt to lead to a coroner's inquest; and whilst we are bound to accept the decision of the Highgate Justices, we are yet at liberty to ask whether a devoted husband who, after nearly murdering his wife, does not put on his spectacles when he is selecting her medicine, is, on the whole, to be accepted as the type of a spouse in whom absolute and implicit confidence can be safely placed. Mr. Keeble's nerves cannot have been strengthened by the public ordeal which he has had to undergo; Mrs. Keeble's constitution, excellent as it seems to be, must have suffered to some extent from the pocket-knife and the bottle of iodine; and if a third mistake were to happen, we are driven to the question whether either a jury or a bench of magistrates would find it quite consistent with their duty to take a lenient view of the occurrence. We do not presume to form a final judgment on the case; it is sad enough in all conscience, whatever theory we may entertain; but the practical result of our musings is a decided impression that the friends should at once assist the couple to reconsider the peculiarities of their matrimonial position.

ADVERTISEMENT.
THE most vicious Horse conquered and rendered perfectly docile in one half hour. The advertiser respectfully informs the Gentry of Hongkong that in one half hour he can tame the most vicious animal that can be produced, so that he will allow a wheel-barrow to be run over him, a gun fired off his back, and will allow a child to ride him without saddle or bridle; the animal shall allow the advertiser to leap upon his back, over his hind quarters, or over his head. The horse shall playfully canter after him and from him and return again at his whistle. Gentlemen wishing to learn will not be charged until they can perform the above.
